¹ A Humiliation Day was 'a solemn day of Fasting, Prayer, and Humiliation, for the ... sins, and all other the abominations whereof this Nation is guilty' (Act of the Commons of England on 17 March 1648 for keeping a national Humiliation Day on 19 April 1649). Charles I had issued a Proclamation on 8 January 1641/2 appointing 'a general Publique and Solemn Fast.... on the last Wednesday of the Moneth of February then next following'. This was repealed by Parliament in 1649 which decided to appoint particular days to be Humiliation Days. On Friday 4 June 1652 Parliament enacted that: "a day of solemn Fasting and Humiliation be set apart to be observed on ... upon Wednesday the Thirtieth of June (1652)...." Attendance and observance was a legal obligation. (https://www.lancaster.ac.uk/quakers/notes/sp_34b_humiliation.html; accessed 29/3/20)
