<sup>1</sup> Johannes Posselius (the Elder), b. 1528 in Parchim , died August 15, 1591 in Rostock. was a German teacher, professor of Greek language and literature and rector of the University of Rostock. He wrote Graeca Syntax (1565), Olympica Pindars (1586) and Galenic Opuscula (1591). His son, also Johannes Posselius (the Younger), was also Professor of Greek and rector of the university of Rostock. He has little influence beyond Rostock but his publications included the reissue of the Apophthegmata graecolatina published by his father and the Familiarum colloquiorum libellus. Important publications by Posselius (the younger) were the complete edition of Hesiod's works as well as Xenophon's Hercules and the Hecuba of Euripides. (Source Wikipedia 29.02.20)

<sup>2</sup> An Indenture dated 7th July 1635 (D253/2/1GA) lists occupants of premises eventually sold to the Trustees of the Grammar School in 1862 in order for them to build the new Grammar School on the High Street. (See Appendix 1)

<sup>3</sup> The Providence Island colony was established in 1631 by English Puritans on what is now the Colombian Department of Isla de Providencia, about 200 kilometres (120 mi) east of the coast of Nicaragua. Although intended to be a model Puritan colony, it also functioned as a base for privateers operating against Spanish ships and settlements in the region. In 1641, the Spanish overran and destroyed the colony. see Wikipedia entry [https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Providence\_Island\_colony]
